Report:

The fifth day of the new batch Y22 Orientation Programme encompassed motivating and enlightening motivational talks by seniors in the morning and afternoon. These talks were aimed to guide the new batch who have just stepped into college life.

The students came in large numbers to listen to the fruitful advice. In the morning session, the talk was given by Mr. Harsh Dhingra a student of the Y-19 batch and the current coordinator of the Cybros club. His talk encapsulated everything related to the students upcoming college life including academics, coding, and placements. He encouraged the students to explore new domains and be fearless, to join different clubs, and to come out of their shells citing his own experiences. It was an extremely interactive session with the speaker clearing all the doubts patiently in an exquisite manner. A Q n A was held at the end too. His talk gave the students much-needed clarity and vision to progress in their upcoming ventures.

The afternoon session was hosted by Mr. Chirag Vaishnav who holds the position of one of the leads of the LNMIIT Google Developer Student Clubs. His address focussed on maintaining the balance between academics and self-development. He talked about the difference between school and college and the changes the students should implement to adapt to the college life. The interactive session catered to the emerging doubts of the new students. Benefits of clubs, student-faculty bond, senior-junior interaction were all covered in the talk. He also shared snippets from his 4 year long journey with the students. The participants were greatly benefited by his enriching experiences.

The event received positive feedback from both students and C-cell team members.
